How We Collect Your Information

We collect personal information from you or about you in the following ways:

1. When you provide information to us directly. For example, we may obtain personal information when you request information from us, register on the Site, respond to surveys, complete online forms, contact our customer service representatives or otherwise interact with us.
2. Through automated means. We may collect information about your activity on the Sites automatically using tracking technologies, such as cookies, web server logs, and web beacons. Cookies are pieces of information that are stored directly on the computer or device (collectively, the "device") you are using. They allow us to collect information such as the type of browser you are using, the amount of time you spend on the Site, the web pages or applications you visit and the preferences you set up. We use this information to personalize your experience, enhance security, facilitate navigation, display material more efficiently and recognize the device you are using.

You can choose to have your device refuse to accept cookies, and the majority of devices and browsers offer additional privacy settings for cookies. You manage cookie settings through your browser settings. Each device and each browser is a little different, so look at your device settings or your browser's help menu to learn how to modify your cookies. If you refuse cookies, you will lose access to many features that make your user experience more efficient and some of the features provided through the Sites may not function properly. Please note that you will need to modify cookie settings for each device and browser that you use.

We may use a service that collects data remotely by using so-called "pixel tags," "web beacons," "clear GIFs" or similar means (collectively, "Pixel Tags") embedded in the Site's content. A Pixel Tag is an electronic image, often a single pixel (1x1) that is ordinarily not visible to website visitors and may be associated with cookies on visitors' hard drives. The data we collect includes which operating system and browser you use, how you navigate to and through our Site, how long you stay on our web pages, the date and time of connection and IP addresses (the location of your computer or network on the internet). This information is anonymous and does not include your name, email address, or any other contact information.

We may also use third-party web analytics services on the Sites. The providers of these services use technologies such as cookies, web server logs and web beacons to help us analyze how users use the Sites. The information collected through these means (including your IP address) will be disclosed to these service providers. Third parties otherwise may not collect personally identifiable data about your online activities over time and across different websites when you use any of the Sites.

3. When third parties provide us with information. In the course of providing products and services, we may receive information about you from third parties. These third parties may include banks, mortgage bankers, mortgage brokers, credit unions, mortgage loan servicers, mortgage investors, consumer reporting agencies or other parties.

How We Respond to a "Do Not Track" Signal from Your Browser

Do Not Track ("DNT") is a not-yet-finalized concept by which internet users may choose to control the collection of personally identifiable information about the user's online activities over time and across third-party websites or online services. Currently, various browsers offer an option that relies on a technology known as a DNT header, which sends a signal to websites visited by the browser user about the user's DNT preference. You can usually access your browser's DNT option in your browser's tools or preferences.

Internet industry groups and regulators have been working to develop a uniform standard for how websites and online services should respond to browser DNT signals. No consensus has been reached on the final standard, and without an industry standard for DNT, users cannot know how any given website responds to a browser DNT signal.

We take privacy and security very seriously. However, due to the absence of a browser DNT signal standard, and the lack of a consensus on how websites should interpret a DNT signal at this time, we currently do not respond to browser DNT signals.

From time to time, we may make changes to this Policy in order to accommodate new technologies, industry practices, regulatory requirements or for other purposes. If we do make changes to the Policy, we will also update the "Effective Date" posted at the top of the Policy. We encourage you to review the Policy periodically to ensure that you understand how we collect, use and share information provided or collected through the Sites.
